BARPER THE CONVICT Suffers From Bright's Disease-The Physicians Were Wrong.

the convict and ex-president of the Pidelity National bank, now in prison here, is suffering from a disease the seriousness of which is yet to be deterseriousness of which is yet to be determined. Nearly a year ago Harper insisted that he was in the incipient stages of Bright'adisease and requested treatment, but after examination the prison physicians told him that he was mistaken as they could discover no real trouble and refused to admit him to the hospital. Since then he has been performing his usual duties of bookkeeping, and it was given out that he was suffering from hypochondria. But the doctors have had to confess that they were wrong. They are now treating him for kidney troubles. He is much reduced in flesh, having lost thirty pounds.

A Frightful Scene.

Miss M. L. Merriam, of Boston, was ill in bed at the time of the accident; in fact too ill to realizeher danger. She was nearly thrown on the floor by the shock. She dressed herself slowly and was one of the last to get on deck. "I never before saw such a scene," she said. The ship was at the mercy of the sea and the waves were dashing up on the decks. The passengers were huddled together in the passage-ways, or on the stairs, or were running about as best they could on deck. Most of them had been calmed, but their faces were white with terror. We had a terrible storm Suuday morning. The sea was worse than we had ever seen it. We feared that the bulkheads would not hold out and at night had become so frightened that we could not go to bed, but set down in the companionway. Seventeen of the Spree's passengers have started for America on the steamship Etroria. The rest will wait to the steamship Etroria.

PRINCE BISMARCK CHERRED.

Berlin, Dec. 4 .- Prince Bismarel arrived at Friedrichs Run from Varsein last evening. Despite the heavy snow storm a large crowd went to meet him. storm a large crowd went to meet him. The crowd waited patiently at the station for the prince's train which was half an hour late, and when he appeared cheered him repeatedly. The prince bowed and smiled but made no speech. He ate a light luncheon and drank a glass of grog, over which he talked politics with two national liberal deputies and two or three personal friends. He said that the military bill was a reprehensible measure, originating in the government's desire for large numbers. He did not think that it could be got through the reichstag. The proposal of the government to raise more money through the beer tax was the most unpopular one that could be made for the purpose, he said. The increase of revenue might much better be derived from tobacco. He is said to have assured one of the natural liberal deputies that he would appear in the reichstag shortly. At the Spandu station another demonstration was made. Those who my Prince Eismarck agree that he is looking exceptionally well. He is erect and hearty and he waiks and talks with all his old time energy.

London, Dec. 4.—The Standard's dispatches from Berlin described Prince Bismarck's reception in that city. At the station Bismarck apparently had just recovered from a nap. A group of ladies gave him a bunch of fine chrysanthemums. He examined them closely and then remarked: "They are a new flower and not very pretty. They have no performe." The crowd cheered continually during the short stop made by the train Many shouted "Come to the reichstag." "Wait a little," Bismarck answered. At the Lehrter station the Countess Perponcher and several other titled women gave the prince great bunches of roses. The prince smiled, put the roses to his face and remarked: "These are beautiful—much finer than these new flowers which have no performe." After the prince had returned from luncheon to the platform began shouting, "Come beet the neighborhood of the Gould house, was alive today with curious men and women, who had a morbid desire to see the place in which the financier had lived and died. For every man in the crowd there were at least three women and the throng represented all walks of life. When the doors of the house would open to admit an insumate friend of the family or a messenger with floral gifts some of the curious would stop to look in and this would check the progress of the mass behind and attract those in front. The others across the street, thinking something had happened within the house, would stop and stars. As a result of this a regular blockade occurred more than a score of times during the afternoon. Abraham Gould, the younger brother of the financier, will arrive tomorrow morning. Mrs. will arrive tomorrow morning. WIAH HIS DOG AND GUN

It was in this car that President Lincoln was conveyed from Philadelphia to Washington for his second inauguration and his remains were transjorted from Washington to Springfield, Iil., after his assassination. The heating apparatus and kitchen are located in the front end of the car. At the rear end is a large drawing room which is meats are served and a small table containing a silver water service. The floor is covered with Brussels carpet and Persian rugs. At the end of the drawing room is a round plate class mirror. The windows are all supplied with double curtains. The car is lighted by oil lamps with neat white shades, fitted electric bells, thermometers, footstools and silver-plated cuspidors. The drawing-room opens upon a large covered observation platform, which is made comfortable with plush chairs. The extension table will accommodate twelve or fifteen guests. Ben Hooker, who has been in charge of this car twenty-two years, will attend to the culinary wants of the president-elect. He is assisted on this trip by Harry Radchiff. Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Davis boarded the Supshine shortly before 3

Mr. Cleveland stood upon the deck of the Sunshine when she reached the wharf, but immediately went below, where luncheon was served in the cabin. The principal feature of the meal was hot steamed oysters. At 6:15 Mr. Cleveland left the yacht. Some forty people were gathered upon the landing. He shook hands with Mies Nellie M. Smith and a half dozen other ladies pleasantly, saying that he was very glad to see them. He at once entered a carriage in company with entered a carriage in company with Clarke Davis and Joseph L. Ferrell, who came with him from the island and was driven to the station. At 6:35 the was driven to the station. At 6:35 the little party entered the private car, the curtains were tightly drawn, a watch was stationed to guard each entrance to the car and every arrangement for the journey north was completed. Before leaving the island it is eaid that Mr. Cleveland announced his intention of returning to Broadwater early in next May to fish for drumheads.

Exmore, Va., Dec. 4.—The train conveying the little party homeward left Exmore at precisely 10:40 tonight. Mr. Cleveland is looking remarkably well and appears to have been benefitted by his visit to Broadwater island. The train is due to arrive in Philadelphia at 5:10 and reaches Jersey City at 7:50 temorrow morning.

Dictating Democrats.

Topkka, Kas., Dec. 4.—In all the figures given on the new legislature the populists have been credited with 33; republicans, 30, and democrats, 2. These two democrats are in the house and the senate was shown to stand: Republicans, 15; populists, 25. Today it is learned that two of the senators reported as populists are straight out democrats and have declared themselves for a democratic United States senator and no compromise. The four democrats in the legislature can, therefore, dictate the senator if they stand firm, as the republicans will be short three and the populists two on joint ballot.

fail and that a proposition should then be made to repeal the Shermau law, what then? That will be proposed, anyway, I presume. I am in favor of repealing it if we can get something better for silver. I don't like the Sherman law myself. At the time it was proposed I stated on the floor of the house, and in my report, that it would not increase the value of silver or tend to promote its restoration, that it would be a failure in that respect. Yet you might say it is the connecting link between total demonetization and something better. Hence, I think it would be bad policy to repeal it unless we can do something also at the same time."
